

October 20, 2025

Jaylin Lucas
Florida State
Running Back
Height: 5090	Weight: 173	Year: 4JR	Jersey #: 12	Hometown: Houma, LA
Games Reviewed: 2025 Alabama, East Texas A&M, Kent State, Virginia
2025 Stats: 14 carries, 101 yards, 5 catches, 76 yards
Career Stats:
Scouting Report by: Danny Nolan

Critical Factors
Vision	Contact Balance	Passing Game Impact
6	4	5
Positional Factors
Play Speed	Elusiveness	Power
7	5	3
Playmaker	Catching Skill	Pass Pro
5	6	4
Ball Security	Toughness	ST Value
5	5	6

Strengths

- Speed
- Pass-catching ability
- Vision

Weaknesses

- Strength
- Pass protection
- Run blocking

Overall

Jaylin Lucas is a change-of-pace back for the Florida State Seminoles. Lucas spent the first two years of his collegiate career at Indiana before transferring to Florida State ahead of the 2024 season. He played in just 2 games that year before sustaining a season-ending injury. Lucas has played in 31 career games, 23 at Indiana and 8 as a Seminole. Of those 31 games, he has started 8, all with the Hoosiers. Although he is a running back, Lucas has spent more time in the slot than in the backfield. He is a dynamic athlete who possesses great quickness and speed, but running through defenders is not part of his game. He has a slight build and has been featured most as a gadget player, getting most of his touches via jet sweep. He is not one to seek out hard contact, but that is hardly because he is not competitive and more so a result of his slender frame.

Run Game

Speed is Lucas' calling card in the run game. He is a serious threat in space, and he makes slipping past the average defender look easy. He has good vision, and, when paired with speed, Lucas can read the gaps in the offensive line, make meaningful jump cuts, and burst through. His ability to elude defenders is sufficient, but it is largely predicated on speed. He can burn his way around a defender or break through an arm tackle if he is moving fast enough. If not, he lacks the one-cut ability or footwork to make a man miss in the open field and the strength to truck an oncoming defender. For this reason, he becomes much more of a threat if given the area to utilize his speed. He is an east-west runner always looking for the big play, and he knows his best chance of breaking off a chunk gain is outside the tackles. At the end of runs, he will hop out of bounds rather than take on a looming defender. When asked to block for a run, Lucas looks lost, having no chance against an oncoming linebacker or defensive back.

Pass Game

Lucas' work in the pass game is a mixed bag. He is uncomfortable in pass protection. His ability to locate the most dangerous rusher is average at best, and he has considerable trouble actually making meaningful blocks. His size does him no favors, as he can be overwhelmed by a powerful blitz. When it comes to catching passes, Lucas excels, demonstrating fluidity befitting someone who lines up in the slot as often as he does. When out on a route, he is as dangerous as a wide receiver. Putting Lucas on the field for passing plays is a gamble for coaches, as he poses extreme risk as a blocker but significant upside as a receiver.

Last Word

In the NFL, Lucas projects as a gadget player who could have his number called a few times per game. He has the positional flexibility to line up as a receiver, making it tough for defenses to keep track of him. He possesses third down ability, but he should not be relied upon to protect the quarterback. Lucas has fielded both kicks and punts as a Seminole, and his value as a returner should translate to the next level. His blazing speed makes him a weapon, but he has shown conservative tendencies catching kicks at Florida State, often calling for fair catches or taking touchbacks. Since he lost his first year at Florida State to injury, it might do Lucas well to remain in college for another season so he can get stronger and put more plays on tape.

One-Liner: Lucas is a one-dimensional back who has the speed to carve out a role in the NFL but will be held back by his lack of size and strength.

Grade: 5.6 - Ceiling: 5.9 (15%) Floor: 5.4 (25%) Round: PFA